

Crime Victim/Survivor Services A.A.S.

Program Description

Americans are becoming more aware of crime and its effect on them and their community. A survey of American voters, the Battleground Survey, found that crime topped the list of citizen's concerns. Individuals who are victimized, their families and the community at large are in need of support and intervention from trained professionals in the areas of crisis management, intervention and victim advocacy. The Associate of Applied Science degree in Crime Victim/Survivor Services provides the education necessary for entry-level positions in victim advocacy. The degree will also provide an opportunity for those currently working in the field to maintain and/or upgrade their education and training.

(Note: Due to the nature of the work, practicum sites and potential employers in the field often require a background check for criminal records prior to placement or hiring with that agency.)
